GUIDE FOR FAMILIES OF EX-SOLDIERS

About the best we have yet seen in advice to civilians to help them in guiding discharged servicemen back into normal peacetime living are ten commandments recently laid down by Dr. Luther E. Woodward of the Rehabilitation Division of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene. Many men will come back with attitudes which may seem strange to the home folk. As a guide to receiving and helping a man scarred in mind or body we offer the following commandments set forth by Dr. Woodward:
(1) Welcome him warmly and quietly—don't call a family reunion.

(2) Listen understandingly, but don't pry into buttle experiences.
(3) Face the reality of disability but don't magnify it. Focus on what is left-not what is lost.

Treat him as a normal, competent person.

Commend his efforts and success and ignore the slips. We all prefer praise to nagging.

(6) Expect him to be different. Take time to get reacquainted. Allow him time and freedom to become readjusted and re-estab-

(8) Create an atmosphere of expectancy; encourage him to take up his favorite hobbies, to look for congenial work and lead a normal social life, but avoid pushing or regulating him. Top-sergeant methods won't work at home. (9- Get professional help, if needed in solving personal or family problems. Don't just muddle through,

(10) Let your own faith and spirit be your chief stock in trade.

Other situations will require attention: There will doubtless be many marriage and home problems. Some of the war marriages, has-tily entered into, will find difficult sailing. Dr. Woodward hopes that "we will do better than after World War 1, when 80 per cent of the hasty marriages ended in separation."

A SLOGAN FOR EAST HAVEN

There's something snappy about a good slogan. Advertisers have lice work here when the town's There's something snappy about a good slogan. Advertisers have long used slogans to focus attention upon their products. Some folk have told us that they believe East Haven should have a slogan, a brief collection of apt words which would epitomize this community. It has been suggested that THE NEWS sponsor some sort of contest which might result in the birth of just the right kind of slogan. We are giving serious thought to a contest such as is suggested, a contest in which our business people, our school children, and the community at large could participate.

Guest Speaker

Attorney T. Holmes Bracken, town counsel, addressed Associated Business at the Chowder House last Thursday evening.

In connection with his duties in that office he told of complications which arise within the various town departments. He told of laws and ordinances peculiar to Branford which require attention of a legal adviser. He told too of unusual circumstances likely to develop. The counsel is responsible for correct presentation or town meeting calls and he must stand ready to defend the town on legal matters when called upon to do so.

Mrs. Duby Crispbell was appointed to name her own committee to study th eadvisability of publishing material advertising Branford to those who write letters of inquiry. Of the 30 attending, four
