A LITTLE ABOUT THIS AND THAT

BY PAUL H. STEVENS

TRAFFIC LIGHT AT FORBES PLACE

We note with interest that the Fairmont Police Department of the Annex is installing an overhead traffic light at the intersection of Oakley street and the Cut-Off, two blocks east of the traffic light at Townsend avenue.

If the police and public safety officials of the Annex are able thus to control and safeguard traffic on the Cut-Off in their jurisdiction, many East Haven people have inquired as to why our local guardians of public safety cannot have the same privilege in regard to the placing of a traffic light at Forbes Place and the Cut-Off.

Heretofore when sentiment has been sounded for a traffic light at Forbes place and the Cut-Off the answer has been that the local communities cannot slow or stop traffic on a through state highway such as the Cut-Off. We have always felt that answer was a lot of nonsense. If a traffic light is needed to safeguard the public and to ease the flow of travel we believe it only sensible that such a light should be placed.

Forbes place is the main approach to and exit from the Cut-Off for East Haven people. It is becoming increasingly difficult to cut into the Cut-off because of the heavy flow of traffic. The need for a traffic light at this intersection is imperative. If the Annex police can place a traffic light at an intersection in no way comparable to that of Forbes place and the Cut-off we ask why cannot East Haven have the same privilege. Let's get that traffic light this summer.

MILESTONE IN PUBLIC HEALTH

The weekly bulletin of the Connecticut State Department of Health tells us that June 4, 1947, may long be remembered as a red-letter day in the state's public health history. On that day, the General Assembly passed House Bill 175, the Health District Bill recommended by Governor McConaughy in his inaugural message. The Assembly also appropriated $25,000 for financing district health departments during the next two years. While this is a modest appropriation it marks a beginning of the time when all communities, not just a few, can have full public health services.

According to the health bulletin, the new act permits two or more towns, cities and boroughs to unite into a locally self-governing district department of health. The state may provide funds up to half the cost of operation but not to exceed $20,000 to any district.

There are now 13 full-service local departments of health in Connecticut. These departments are located mainly in the large cities, and serve approximately half the population of the whole state. The remaining 50 percent of the Connecticut residents do not receive the benefit of a full-service program.

The state bulletin tells us that it is none too soon to inform residents of Connecticut towns of the possibilities of the Health District Act. Only concerted action will convince local boards of selectmen that full-service local health departments are desirable and necessary. An affirmative vote at an early town meeting can make such a department an actuality. The State Department will gladly assist with any phase in the development of district departments of health.

East Haven and neighbor-towns take notice.

ALONG THE LAUREL TRAILS

We have seldom seen Laurel in bloom so beautiful as this season. Probably the cool, wet weather that has been with us all spring has had something to do with this because we note that the cultivated flowering shrubs of our gardens are also putting on a special display of color and quantity this year. While East Haven is by no means the Laurel town of Connecticut, yet we do have some very beautiful plantings of it scattered around our shady by-ways and rock-ribbed lanes.

To really enjoy the Laurel season one must take a motor trip into the Connecticut Laurel country such as Bolton Notch up east, or over to Vernon in Litchfield County, up above Satan's Kingdom between Winsted and Torrington, or around the Barkhamsted and Nepaug reservoirs. The blooms were at their best the past week.

Albert Ellis, our friend and fellow editor, who publishes the interesting East Hampton News above the serene shores of rustic Lake Pocotapaug, has delved into the story of Laurel and has produced some interesting information about Connecticut's colorful state flower.

"Its fragrance and the massed richness of its white and pink blossoms, so vividly in contrast with the gloom of the virgin forest, at once attracted the notice of the early settlers and explorers, John Smith mentioned it in his 'General History' of 1624. In 1750, the Swedish traveller, Peter Kalm, sent specimens of it to Linnaeus, and the famous botanist, finding that it belonged to a genus of evergreen hitherto unknown, gave it the name 'Kalmia latifolia.' In the first name he honored his correspondent, and in the second, described the 'wide-leaved' characteristic of the plant.

"Because it bore some resemblance to the European laurel, the settlers of New England already spoke of it as 'laurel' or 'mountain laurel.' They also adopted the name 'spoonwood', from the Indians, who had carved some of their eating utensils from the close-grained wood. A later generation dubbed it 'calico bush,' from its resemblance to the printed cloth, and both of these descriptive names are still occasionally heard.

"In Connecticut, the mountain laurel blossoms in the latter part of June. It is characteristic of the plant that the flower clusters appear in greatest profusion every second or third years, so that the area enriched by it in one season, may have little to show in the next. But, as with evergreens, the foliage is prized as well as the flower, and the wide use of its mountain laurel for decorative purposes prompted Connecticut to protect its state flower by the passage of the 'Laurel Law,' a pioneer enactment in the field of conservation.

"The mountain laurel's immediate relatives in America are the azalea and the rhododendron. It is also cousin to the huckleberry and the blueberry, so abundant in our fields."

Seek Special Meeting on Ambulance Use

At the monthly meeting of the Saltonstall Civic Association in the Hagaman Memorial Library Tuesday night it was decided to ask the Board of Public Safety to call a special public hearing during the present month to hear the wishes of the citizens concerning a proposed change of rules governing the use of the Town Ambulance. The action followed a report by a committee consisting of Mr. Walker, Mr. Ryan and Mrs. Hunt who earlier in the evening had discussed the problem with the Board of Public Safety at its meeting. They reported that the board had asked that the association submit its request in writing.

Members felt, however that with the increase in motor traffic during the summer months, it was imperative that decision be reached quickly as to whether or not the town ambulance is to be used in emergency accident cases, and that all interested should be given an opportunity of expressing their opinions to the safety board at the earliest date possible. Under the present rules the ambulance cannot be used unless ordered out by a physician and the complaint is that it is sometimes impossible to obtain a doctor locally in an emergency.

New Sales Tax Now In Effect In State

State Levy Will Be Collected From Customers By Retailers At Time Of Purchase

The new State Sales Tax went into effect Tuesday July 1.

For the information of our readers we are presenting excerpts from the new tax law. This digest is intended to give salient facts and does not include all technicalities nor adhere strictly to air-tight legal language.

For the privilege of selling tangible personal property at retail a tax is imposed upon all retailers at the rate of three percent of the gross receipts of any retailer from July 1, 1947, to June 30, 1951. This tax shall be collected by the retailer from the consumer. In addition to a tax of three cents on each full dollar, taxes on parts of a dollar of sales will run as follows; less than thirteen cents, no tax, thirteen to thirty-five cents, one cent tax; thirty-six to seventy cents two cents tax; seventy-one cents to $1.12, three cents tax.

It is unlawful for a retailer to advertise, state or imply that the tax or any part of it will be absorbed by him or that it will not be added to the selling price of the property sold. On and after August 1, each retailer must have and display a permit issued by the tax commissioner.

Exemptions Exempted from the sales tax are the following:

Sales to the state or any of its political subdivisions.

Sales which the state is prohibited from taxing under the constitution or laws of the United States.

The furnishing, or service of, gas, water, electricity, telephone and telegraph when delivered to the consumer through mains, lines or pipes.

Sales of medicine only by prescription.

Sales to and by non-profit charitable hospitals.

Sales of newspapers and magazines by subscription.

Sales of cigarettes already taxed by state law.

Sales to charitable and religious organizations.

Sales of meals in education institutions to members of the institutions.

Sales of children's clothing.

Professional, insurance or personal service.

Livestock and poultry, feeds seeds, plants and fertilizer.

The sale of food products for human consumption. "Food products" include cereals and cereal products, milk and milk products, oleomargarine, meat and meat products, fish and fish products, eggs and egg products, vegetables and vegetable products, ducts, fruit and fruit products, spices and salt, sugar and sugar products other than candy and confectionery, coffee and coffee substitutes tea cocoa and cocoa products other than candy and confectionery.

Digest of New Law Shows Great Many Items Are Exempted From The Tax

"Food Products" do not include spirituous malt or vinous liquors, soft drinks, sodas or beverages such as are ordinarily dispensed at bars and soda fountains, or in connection therewith, medicines except by prescription, tonics and preparations in liquid, powdered, granular, tablet, capsule, lozenge and pill form sold as dietary supplements or adjuncts. "Food products" also do not include meals served on or off the premises of the retailer or drinks or foods furnished, prepared or served for consumption at table, chairs or counters or from trays, glasses, dishes, or other tableware provided by the retailer.

Sales of containers for filling and selling with contents; containers holding non-taxable contents returnable containers sold with contents.

Receipts from distribution, storage, use or other consumption of motor vehicle fuel.

Sales of fuel used exclusively for domestic purposes.

Thoughts for U.N.'s Second Birthday

—Rome wasn't built in a day either—

EDITORIAL

Tomorrow, the citizens of Branford and the United States will take time off to celebrate the second birthday of the United Nations. The fourth of July. When the fourth rolls around, it's usually an automatic signal for editors to take their pens or sit down at their typewriters to warn people of all the pitfalls and dangers which will prevent this from being a "safe and sane" fourth of July.

We don't want to be very different. We want people to be careful when they drive on the highways which will probably bear record-breaking traffic; we don't want people to drive at the beaches; nor do we want to see any youngsters maimed or blinded through carelessness with fireworks, legal or illegal.

What we want to add to those warnings is a warning of another danger. That danger is the feeling which seems to prevail among many people that there is not enough room in this world for Russia and the United States to live side by side because of the differences in their respective governments and economic systems.

To intimate in any way that our way is desirable under any circumstances is unthinkable. Has the slaughter, the terrible destruction and the loss of lives during the last war been so soon forgotten? Is it because we feel so secure with the atom bomb at our back and call it is because of our successive record of winning wars that we feel we will go on winning? Is it because we have more money, more raw material, more productive capacity than any other nation that we feel so cocksure? And finally, will all those things ever bring back the lives that have been taken; or the arms, legs, and eyes that have been lost?

To those who feel honestly that a war with Russia will settle our difficulties and provide us with a peaceful world, we ask, when has war ever solved anything? The answer is not to push for war, but to devote our efforts for peace. The solution for peace in the world is the framework of the United Nations, now celebrating its second birthday.

It is true that the wrangling and dissension at the various sessions of the United Nations has been very discouraging. And it is true that on almost all counts it has been Russia who has opposed the United States in all of our efforts toward some sort of concrete action for peace. But the constant bickering on the floor of the U.N. assemblies is far preferable to fighting with bullets, fire pieces and atom bombs.

For this fourth of July let's be careful not to get into any accidents on the highways, not to let our children get out of sight at the beaches, and not to get hurt playing with fireworks. Above all, let's not give up hope for peace; let's not willingly wish for war.

President Says Light Company Is Vindicated

Reporting to stockholders of The Connecticut Light and Power Company on the recent abandonment of the Federal Power Commission of its six-year effort to bring the Connecticut utility under federal jurisdiction, President C. L. Campbell, in a special letter, expressed his satisfaction that the Company's position has been vindicated.

Mr. Campbell outlines in his letter the Company's adherence to Connecticut legislation affecting public utilities and its successful opposition to the PFC's contention of January 7, 1944 that the Company was subject to the jurisdiction of the PFC.

The contention was upheld by the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia on February 28, 1944, but the decision of the lower court was set aside by the United States Supreme Court on March 26, 1945 with instructions to remand the case to the PFC for further proceedings. The lower court decision was set aside by the PFC on July 3, 1946 and in December of that year a hearing was held to question whether the case should be dismissed or new evidence heard as to the facts. Nothing further was heard on the matter, Mr. Campbell said, until the summer of 1946 when the Supreme Court issued a decision vacating its former orders and concluding that the proceedings should be terminated.

References to the Company's severing of out-of-state connections which would, the PFC insisted, have placed the utility under federal jurisdiction, were commented on by Mr. Campbell's letter:

"The recent opinion of the Federal Power Commission restraining them from doing anything in Great Cove Flats that will interfere with the rights of Branford citizens. Temporary injunction restraining them from doing anything in Great Cove Flats that will interfere with the rights of Branford citizens. July 1948—Information learned by R. P. Thomson from the Weekly Phoenix. As to fish-fishing at Short Beach; of course everybody goes fishing and fishing, but they generally use the alver hook, and just down at the foot of the hill is a fish house where the best of fish are sold."

So MUCH... for so LITTLE

LOOKS as though this lucky young fellow is getting more than his money's worth. And maybe he isn't pleased at his unexpected good fortune!

Getting a lot for just a little would please anyone in these days of high living costs. But there is one item in your household budget that actually costs less now than ever before! That item is electricity.

ELECTRICITY washes your clothes, lights your home and performs its many other household tasks efficiently and dependably, day in and day out. Yet today, if yours is the average family, your money buys twice as much electricity as it did twenty years ago.

The buying power of your electric dollar didn't just happen, as in the case of the lucky lad with the ice-cream cone. Increased use of electricity on your part and careful planning and sound business-management on the part of your friends and neighbors at your light and power company continue to keep the price of electricity down—helping you to obtain delivery of new generating capacity. As a result of these conditions and careful study of future loads an additional unit for installation of two 10,000-kilowatt generators is currently underway. The first of these replacement units is expected to go into operation early in 1948 and the second in the latter part of that year, Mr. Campbell said.

In addition, the Company's plans call for the installation of a new 60,000 kilowatt unit at the Devon plant in 1950 to replace a 25,000 kilowatt unit installed in 1924. Mr. Campbell pointed out that it now takes approximately four years to obtain delivery of new generating capacity. As a result of these conditions and careful study of future loads an additional unit for installation of two 10,000-kilowatt generators is currently underway. The first of these replacement units is expected to go into operation early in 1948 and the second in the latter part of that year, Mr. Campbell said.

Modernize your kitchen with baked-on white enamel metal cabinets. Floor and wall models available. Immediate delivery.

Success! From where I sit, even a newspaper editor's entitled to a few mistakes. And since I reported that they served a moderate beer-erage like beer, I'm sure nobody thinks the picnic was the least bit wild, or anything but a huge success—and I mean huge!

Of course it was Elmer, my typewriter, who had made the misprints: But is my face red! It's only because folks are so temperate and well-behaved in our town, that they could afford to take the whole thing in as a joke.

Thoughts for U.N.'s Second Birthday

—Rome wasn't built in a day either—

Tomorrow, the citizens of Branford and the United States will take time off to celebrate the second birthday, the fourth of July. For editors to take up their pens or sit down at their typewriters to write people of all the pitfalls and dangers which will prevent this from being a "safe and sane" fourth of July.

We don't want to be very different. We want people to be careful when they drive on the highways which will probably bear crowded traffic; we don't want people to drown at the beaches; nor do we want to see any youngsters maimed or blinded through carelessness with fireworks, legal or illegal.

What we want to add to those warnings is a warning of another danger. That danger is the feeling which seems to prevail among many people that it will take another war to settle the problems of the world; that there is not enough room in this world for Russia and the United States to live side by side because of the differences in their respective governments and economic systems.

To intimate in any way that another war is desirable under any circumstances is unthinkable. Has the slaughter, the terrible destruction and the loss of lives during the last war been so soon forgotten? Is it because we feel so secure with the atom bomb at our back and call it is because of our successive record of winning wars, that we feel we will go on winning? Is it because we have more money, more raw material, more productive capacity than any other nation that we feel so cocksure? And, finally, will all those things ever bring back the lives that have been taken, or the arms, legs, and eyes that have been lost?

To those who feel honestly that a war with Russia will settle our difficulties and provide us with a peaceful world, we ask, who has ever solved anything? The answer is not to push for war, but to devote our efforts for peace. The solution for peace in the world is the framework of the United Nations, now celebrating its second birthday.

It's true that the wrangling and dissonance at the various sessions of the United Nations has been very discouraging. And it is true that States in all of our efforts toward some sort of concrete action for peace. But the constant hickering on the floor of the UN assemblies, far preferable to fighting with bullets, fire pieces and atom bombs.

For this fourth of July let's be careful not to get into any accidents on the highways, not to let our children get out of sight at the beaches, and not to get hurt playing with fireworks. Above all, let's not give up hope for peace; let's not willingly wish for war.

Puzzled? Perplexed? Ask Julia Lyncath

Dear Julia, My three year old son suddenly has become afraid of the dark. Up till recently he would sleep all alone in his dark bedroom and never make a sound. Now he cries every time it's bedtime. What shall I do?

Unless I am mistaken something happened to your son to suddenly make him afraid of the dark. He recently been told stories about robbers or ghosts who roam around at night? Or has he been punished by putting him in a darkened room? Or has someone recently started reading stories to him about frightening happenings which occur at night?

Think back and you will surely discover that some seemingly insignificant remark or incident has started the fear reaction. Once you have discovered what it is, your problem is half solved. What you need to do then, is to recondition him so he is not afraid of the dark. Actually, the fear is what is known as a conditioned response. Therefore, he will have to be taught little by little that there is nothing frightening about the lightened room, anymore than the lightened one. Try turning the light out while you are in the room with him. Be sure, though, to hold his hand and reassure him that you are there. Do this a few times during the day. Then during the night, start teaching him not to be afraid by leaving the light in a nearby hall, until there is no further need for the light. But this method of reconditioning him cannot be rushed. You must be patient, understanding, and kind. If he wants the door open and the light on, do it by all means. Do not let him feel that he is being punished. Above all, do not try to force him to stay in a dark room alone. This is one of the cruellest things a father or mother can do to a young child. And one of the most dangerous to his mental health. And once he has mastered the darkened room, let this sorry business serve as an example for you or anyone responsible for the fear starting never to subject a child to frightening stories at night, or to a darkened room for punishment. Both of these methods of dealing with young children, are cruel and unnecessary.

What shall I do with a child who has stopped liking his milk? How can I get him to like it again? It's so good for him.

A Mother Offer him eustard, junket and any milk dish which he might like. Tell your mother about his not taking his milk, the sooner he will drink it again.

Address all letters to Julia Lyncath in care of the East Haven News.

Urgent Appeal Is Made For Foster Homes

M. Louise Hemmings, chairman of the Foster Home project sponsored by the Council of Social Agencies, today addressed an urgent appeal to East Haven residents to provide for children needing foster homes.

A desperate situation was outlined by Miss Hemmings as she urged local residents to "open their hearts and their homes" to children who have been left without home care.

Miss Hemmings described the children's need as "urgent", pointing out that many of them have no parents or relatives and may stay in overcrowded institutions unless homes can be found for them.

As Mr. Brinley Sees It

"Where there is no vision the people perish."

There must ever be vision, physical and by all means spiritual. If both, then so much the more perfect a Nation that looks no further than its present generation, has already passed out of existence. If the mechanics of the hour is it that engages its attention, then it is dead indeed, all it needs is the earth thrown over it, so another can build upon its ruins. When a stream reaches the ocean, it is so cleaned of its filth, but how much good, and how much joy it could have been to the many, which it should have served, had its source been pure, and its onward course been protected from pollution. A Nation is like a great river. If its ideals are pure, good, based on the righteousness of God, its laws created for the poor as well as the rich—if the standard of living, the same for all, if corrupt politicians, whether they be in the Senate, the House, or other positions of authority, were punished as thieves and murderers receive their just dues, what a place this would be to live in. The Law, as taught in the College Class rooms is one thing, but the Law, as administered in our so-called Hall of Justice, is another brand, and the underdog knows it, and the great interested interests know it, and they are only successful "Gangsters" who are protected by the Law, and who crooked Lawyers, and no the Law flows on until internal strife slowly increases on all sides, until war sweeps it clean.

Russia, she does not wish it, and we have so much war going on right here in our own Country, and a lot more to come.

Well, at least we have this to com-

Drum Corps to Hold Field Day Here July 19

Drum Corps from all parts of Connecticut will come to East Haven for a state-wide Field Day and an exhibition of their drumming skills on Saturday, July 19.

A feature of the day's festivities will be a big street parade in which the visiting drum corps will participate starting at 6:15 P. M. The line of march will include Main street.

The parade will be under the auspices of the Bradford Manor P. D. and will be a most interesting affair. The drum corps will be invited to other drum corps of the state to attend.

Trophies and certificates will be awarded and there will be medals for majoring and twirling.

Red Cross Swim Classes Start Mon.

All children participating in the free swimming program sponsored by the local branch of the American Red Cross at the Monomiggin Beach for two weeks starting Monday July 7th are requested to be on hand promptly at 9:30 A. M. the first day.

At this time the schedule for the various groups will be arranged.

COMPLAINTS HEARD ABOUT FARM RIVER
The Saltontail Civic Association News, "Scan", states that quite a few complaints are heard about the river being obstructed in Farm River. It urges that everyone keep a sharp lookout and as soon as anyone violates the sanitation code report it immediately to the health officer and prompt action will be taken. Everyone's health is endangered if this condition is allowed to exist.

Train Celebrates 59th Birthday

On Wednesday, June 25, the "Gilt Edge" one of the New Haven's best-known short line birthday trains celebrated its 59th birthday. Although the "Federal Express" from Boston to Washington is the oldest named train operated by the New Haven, the "Gilt Edge" is the oldest to bear the name continuously.

The "Gilt Edge" made its first run in 1888 and was the first train over the shore line to have a dinner, and the first train to cross the Thames River bridge at New London, Conn., when the latter was opened on November 10, 1899. The train was probably given the name "Gilt Edge" because of the unusual amount of highly polished brass which adorned the specially built coaches of the original train.

AGE OF TREES

By George A. Cromie, New Haven Farm Forester southwestern Conn.

How old is that tree, or that woodland? is a question often asked of the forester, and the answer is at times disappointing. The years may seem few if the inquirer wishes to establish the antiquity of some oldtime family shade tree grown in the open, and the growth slow if one is looking forward to quick returns in lumber and wood products from a stand of sprouts or a plantation of young trees.

Actually, I have seen less than a half dozen trees in New England that from verified records or ring count of stump at time of cutting proved to be over 200 years old; and in few cases have I seen profitable thinnings, containing wood, poles, and some size timbers, from woodland less than 50 years of age.

Stands of backwoods timber, oak and other hardwoods, or hemlock in Connecticut, are often found to be 100 to 150 years old; the majestic Cathedral Pines of Cornwall average about 160 years in age; a white oak felled a few years ago in West Meriden proved to be 271 years old; and a black spruce (less than two inches in diameter) secured by a fellow forester from a cold mountain top site on the Gaspe peninsula, Quebec, showed in microscopic section more than 300 annual rings. As a comparison in rapid growth, a 22-inch diameter poplar log (cottonwood variety) recently cut at Southington, Connecticut, proved to be only 34 years old.

A count of annual rings on stumps of felled trees, or of "increment borings" in living trees, is the most reliable record of age. So accurate is this method that archaeologists in semi-dry sections of the Southwest have worked out a "Master Plot Chart" showing sequence variations in tree-ring thickness, with which any piece of wood found in cave dwellings or excavations of that region can be compared, and exactly and chronologically dated—so far, this chart has been completed only from the present back to 11 A. D. In New England, where rainfall is plentiful, and the rate of tree growth is therefore more affected by the amount of sunlight or shade reaching the crown, a count of the rings will still age accurately, but it is difficult or impossible to back-date wood specimens as mentioned above.

Some other methods of telling the age of living trees are: counting

When his Nibs took to cussing with a particular shine to using "J-C" we of the family called a halt and held a couple father-son talks and the situation improved. We explained that J-C was once a baby, a boy and then a man and that his birthday was on Christmas. Having completely forgotten the matter we went about our business. The pay-off came Sunday as he was being bathed. His mother accidentally hit a bruise and his Nibs thundered out "J-C". But when he saw his mother's expression and raised palm he sang out, "Happy birthday to you! Happy birthday to you!"
