East Haven Players Offer Sophisticated Comedy To Public Thursday, Friday

Players Announce Increased Activity For Coming Year

The East Haven Players are planning increased activity for the coming year, it was announced today.

One of the few real active theatre groups in the state, the group plans a three act meeting with similar units in Berlin and Portland in the near future.

The occasion will present a fine chance for interchange of ideas, it was said.

Accepting with their hopes of presenting all types of stage vehicles, it was announced that the next show, following next week's sophisticated comedy, would be a serious drama.

George Godson of North Haven was recently elected president for the coming year. Edith Hammetton, of New Haven, was chosen vice president; Vera Gesner, corresponding secretary; Patricia Fitz-Patrick, recording secretary and Irene Wilson, treasurer.

EXCHANGE CLUB HEARS POLISH PHILOSOPHER

Exchange Club members were treated to an unexpected bit of humor last night at their weekly dinner meeting when the guest speaker, an internationally famous Polish philosopher, Prof. Marcinowski by name, upset all known present and past traditions with a startling speech on Americanism and its results on the behavior of world peoples.

Gradually building up his theme to "get under the skin" of the listeners, the professor directed a flow of loosely-covered insults on the integrity and intelligence of the various races which make up the United States. No need to add that many a starched collar wilted with the heat, as resentment towards the speaker grew.

Comparing the governments of Russia, the talker put more fuel on the already blazing fire with his un-called-for remarks.

By the time his speech drew to a close, the philosopher noticed the hostile attitude of his audience and called for an open forum. Questions were fired at the speaker at the head table along with many direct accusations.

At this point the revelation was made to the listeners that "Prof. Marcinowski, a graduate of the U. of Krakow, Poland," was none other than Middle-town's author of mirth, Eddie Kosicki, renown after dinner speaker and humorist.

Two of the audience, former building inspector, Art Riccio and Metzco Bros. proxy, John Metzco, had shared the spotlight with the speaker, having frantically for all three turned to rolls of laughter over the turn of events.

The true nature of the speaker was pointed out by the group and good grace was restored.

Teacher's Salaries To Be Debated Mon.

An early solution to the question of raises for teachers of the local school system was foreseen today with the announcement by Caryle V. Frawley that a special teachers meeting would take place Monday afternoon.

Members of the Teachers Salary Committee will attend a Board of Education meeting on Monday afternoon. The Board is expected to offer a plan on raises.

The possible terms of the settlement were not available today but rumors throughout the system said that the raises would approximate those offered by the previous Democratic administration.

The teachers rejected an offer last year of $200 plus scheduled increments.

School Survey Report Distribution Okayed By Education Board

Copies of the school survey report are now being distributed following a meeting of the Board of Education at which time the Board voted to present the report through such sources as the P. T. A. Council, the various P. T. A. groups, the Hagaman Memorial Library, the Town Hall, the town's service clubs, and possibly other outlets frequented by the public.

Miss Corinne Peters, a teacher in grade one at the Grove J. Tuttle School, was granted a leave of absence due to illness. She will be replaced by Mrs. Catherine Harrington, who has been substituting for Miss Peters.

The board also voted to paint the superintendent's office, the board room and the first floor teachers' room at the high school.

Approval was given to a local Brownie troop to use rooms at the Grove J. Tuttle School for a special program in the next weeks.

The board voted to have Dept. of Schools William E. Gillis designate areas in all town schools in which smoking may be permitted during various social and educational functions.

The department issued 27 licenses to plumbing contractors, at a total cost of $180. Licenses to electrical contractors, costing $35, and one license to install oil burners for a fee of $5. Two extra electric inspections for code violations also were made for $2 each.

Building Committee Asks Bids To Build New South School

Cesspool Cleaning Plan Goes In Operation Tuesday

East Haven cesspool cleaning plan went into operation today. Applications will be accepted Tuesday, Jan. 15th.

Under the new plan the town will clean all such systems meeting sanitary standards today that inspectors except a fee for inspection.

Applications for cleaning must be obtained from the Building Inspector's office, Barker said, in outlining the plan.

The application will be in triplicate one to be retained by the office, one goes to the operator of the unit and the third is used as a receipt by the home owner.

Barker said that the Branford Sanitary Company, operated by Moody Cooke of that town, had been given the contract for pumping.

Building Inspector Clement Catalano said today that inspectors would be made for each unit to be cleaned both before and after the job is performed.

A fee of eight dollars will be charged for the inspection service. East Haven residents have an opportunity to refuse the town's system and hire their own sanitary disposal service, Catalano said.

The service is only for home owners and not for private business or industrial use.

The inspection of the system will give the building inspector a chance to check on faulty conditions, and make recommendations to the home owner, it was said.

Residents using the service will have to make their own opening and closings, it was emphasized.

In cases where other cesspool cleaning units are used, other than that provided by the town, it will be necessary for the pump to obtain the regular power pumpers' permit according to the present code.

Permits will be available at Catalano's office as in the present case.

Barker said that he had interviewed approximately six different contractors before privately awarding the job.

New Specifications Are Available From Architect H. Davis

All necessary approval having been obtained, East Haven's School Building Committee moved yesterday to obtain bids for the construction of the new South School to be located on Talmadge Avenue, off Short Beach Road.

The invitation to bid was issued in correct legal form and was signed by secretary James Vetrome.

Documents, drawings and specifications can be obtained from the office of the architect Harold H. Davis, 29 Whitney Avenue, New Haven.

The sealed proposals to do the work, including general construction, all mechanical work, grading, paving and seeding will be received by the School Building Committee until 8 P.M. on the evening of February 5, 1952.

The new elementary school will contain eight classrooms, a kindergarten and general purpose room.

Approval of the plans was given by the Board of Education last Friday night and further approval was noted on Monday night at a joint adjourned meeting of the Board of Selectmen, the Board of Finance and the Board of Education. Also present were members of the School Building Committee.

The Finance Board approval was conditional on the contingency that the cost of the building would not exceed the $400,000 limit set by the board several months ago.

The plans have already been accepted by the State Board of Education as well as the local board.

Contractors are warned that specifications for the new school will be ready on or before January 15.

First Selectman Frank A. Barker said today that it was not necessary to hold a town meeting to approve the school since such permission had been formally given previously.

Hornets Travel to Wallingford Friday Night

Fifty Years A Sport

Over in New Haven tonight they're having a little clam bake and every sport in the Hotel. That ballroom will be sold, it's so local. It's a buffet, sort of a state tribute, sort of a school tribute, sort of a university testimonial to the father of the New Haven Boy's Club.

A lot of big men, heads of corporations, men associated with learning, students of Hopkins Grammar School, men of the New Haven streets, are going to have a few well chosen words—and then discover that while they knew Richard L. Lovell, they didn't know Dick, and vice versa.

The twins is meeting—the men who pulled themselves upward with shoeshine boxes to important positions in New Haven's civic and the alumni from the hill west of the New Haven where a preparatory school peeks through leafless trees and scans not only the public beauty of world-famous buildings but also its athletic fields where men are separated from the boys in the Dick Lovell tradition.

This dinner is to honor a man who is rounding out 50 years of achievement in the athletic world. That's how the card reads. Properly, the years mean little. Instead people from all walks of life will try to bring to a man who believed in boys and education and used athletics as a means to an end.

Dick Lovell, a native of New Jersey, first hit New Haven shortly after the country's turn, as a student at Yale University. From his freshman days he took an interest in athletics. He was one of three or four clubs which were engaged in boys' work. An excellent athlete, Dick first showed his leadership qualities when he formed a drill team, just to instill a measure of pride in a tough gang which might otherwise be roaming New Haven streets.

Night after night Dick Lovell went to Yale Hall as did men like John Reed, Kilpatrick, T.A.D. Jones and others. His zeal to provide the youngsters with a real athletic ambition, a Yale tradition, has been passed on to his sons, according to the late Billy Lash, then coach. But he saw athletics as a means of helping them to better stations in the outside world.

Dick won his first victory just after Yale Hall started a club baseball team. He reported for practice one day and noticed that the uniforms were missing. He told the boys that there would be no baseball until the equipment was returned. Some hours later, Billy brought his suit home to be washed and look what it found, then he laid the suits before his coach's eyes and earned nothing but contempt. And because nothing was said, Dick Lovell carried a lifelong grudge.

Once out of Yale, he went, for a three year span to Paul River, Mass., as secretary of the Y.M.C.A. in boys' work. He made important friends. He Yale's innermost secret, returned to the Ell City campus to take sociology in the Divinity School after transferring his affections from forestry to boys.

The second decade of the century was won by its way when Yale Hall and the Workers' Boy Club amalgamated and the famous old Kinder's Footie Club on George Street was dissolved. Their products, the kids of the streets, became the nucleus of the New Haven Boys Club, about 1914. Mr. Lovell was called to his work with youth in Whiteley Street, Congregational Church, to become boys' director of the new unit which was situated on Jefferson Street.

Day and night he worked zealously, spending little time in his home. He organized basketball for all ages and introduced trained officials for supervision, realizing that his teams, born of street material, could not play and beat neighboring boys unless they were protected by the rules.

It was a slow process but gradually the Boy's Club became a power in city amateur play. It was then that Dick Lovell saw an opportunity to experiment. His teams began scheduling prep schools throughout the state and elsewhere. His object was to show his charges that silver spoons could not play and beat just as rough as they. Conversely, he hoped to prove to the prepsters that his lads could abide by rules and that the qualities of gentlemen were not always behind the colors of the old school.

Gradually Mr. Lovell lost track of some of these games. He told of grand wins of professors presiding at post game teas when the boys would self-consciously accept one or two epistles and a spot of cocoa and merriment with thanks and then return to their pockets and pull out handfuls of the tid-bits on the bus ride home.

Then the Boy's Club began to win some of those games and finally in the late twenties became a powerhouse unit capable of competing with the best seven year championship team of the world, the Bradford Laurels, whose own fine players came out of the hedge-podge-of-shops and factories-of-farms and offices and learned their sportsmanship just as fine as that of the New Haveners, from the slickness of the street football foreman, Bob Kelly, a Bradford tradition.

A crowd of 7,000 jammed Hamner Field that November Sunday in 1927 when the two teams met and fate sided with the Ell City, 13-6. But it was a game, the likes of which has never been seen. Bradford's attack, the tricky, plucky speedster, Dave Hylenski, matched his talents against a then local figure, Albie Booth, a bruising lineman, with John Walsh, Fritz Swanson, Johnny Cudgum, Bob Taylor, Pat Sykes, John Keeley, Sweeney Green, Bud Erlich, Fletcher Ferguson, Frank Tommy White, Pats Myers, Jimmy Davin and others. Mighty Mike Cooke and Booth looked up in a sensational punting duel and Charley Jones matched wits with Johnny King, the old Foreham linch. Defensively Ed Apicelli and Alex Struzinski tackled with inhuman force.

A second game was played in a blizzard on the old West Park Field early in December and that one ended in a 0-0 tie after Stu Clancy came down from their cross and put one on the all time great Kesting exhibition in New Haven history. On the bench for the second game was Hylenski whose knee was taped as the result of tearing ligaments and a cartilage, in the first half.

The two teams never met again, but the Clubbers went on to West Point to play the pibes and won their game. It was the crowning achievement of Lovell's Boy's Club days. It was in 1923 when the Boy's Club entered seven matches in New Haven Rec. baseball play and won six titles, tying for the seventh.

But in March of 1929, buffeted back by politics and others for a plan which would have had Boy's Clubs throughout the city, under one name, Lovell was approached by coach Arthur Pepp at a salary which he would not afford to ignore. The job lasted only a year and the depression beckoned Lovell in a retirement program which enveloped the school.

It was then that they first met, Dr. George Lovell (no relation) came to Lovell and asked him to accept a coaching and teaching post on the heights where Hopkins Grammar School lads serenely down on the bustle of New Haven.

Lovell accepted.

Then began a second great experiment. Now on the other side of the globe, Richard L. Lovell sought to awaken the boys to the opportunities before them. In his Boy's Club world, he tried to impress the youths with the fact that one can rise by merit and that hard work and honest effort can bring about remarkable achievements.

Out of the crucible of prep school education, athletic figures arose including some from Bradford. Tom Ward, Bud Erlich, Fletcher Ferguson, Frank Doolley, Connie Matson and now June Office and Pete Abdoni to name a few.

Some have made brilliant names in college sports. Others, non-athletes, from two towns have profited from the disciplinary methods of the old master.

It matters little what words are used tonight to express Bradford's appreciation. Hopkins and the New Haven Boy's Club have both felt the worth and lived under the philosophy of the gray haired, athletic looking figure.

League Leadership Depends On Outcome; Wilcox Here Tues.

The high flying Bradford Hornets swarm to Wallingford Friday night to play their first scheduled game away from home.

Successful in their outings thus far, the Hornets have won three of four games with a tie with the Orange team who have succeeded in tripping Seymour and Shelton with a sharp reversal of form after a slow start.

Local fans are confident that their speedsters will win and point with pride to the team's drive, spirit and sound ability.

The Hornets have demonstrated two types of offense thus far and check closely in a man for man defense. The home team has been able to break away from the zone which has featured their play for a number of seasons and try to match Captain Joe Paul and the local top for home.

Even the most loyal Wallingford fans question the upstate five's ability to stop Bradford for with Paul and athletic Stanton performance. Win Gagliardi will have to be a number of seasons and try to match Captain Joe Paul and the local top for home.

The visitors' performance Staples from two floor 19 to 16 and had an 8 for 14 foul line performance against 16 for 37 on the part of the winners.

The big grudge for the Hornets was the one sided call of the officials who called 30 personals and a pair of technical fouls against Bradford in a distracting exhibition of home town officiating.

Westport Smashes Easties In Bruising Contest, 48-46

A young Westport giant led Staples High to an upset 48-46 win over East Haven on Tuesday night in a bruising contest.

Tom Cheney, crack pivotman, jumped in 20 points in a one man show in the westport gym, and singlehandedly put the crusher on the luckless Easties.

But more disturbing than the work of Tom Cheney's westport center was the one sided call of the officials who called 30 personals and a pair of technical fouls against Bradford in a distracting exhibition of home town officiating.

Shelton Crushes Hornets, 55-33, Behind Tough Zone

Shelton High's basketball boys were flying at half mast yesterday following the season's first defeat. The Gaels galloped as Matusovich clipped the nets on four foul goals and Matusovich secured an equal number plus a single conversion.

Lack of an outside set shooter was the biggest Hornet handicap against Shelton. The Gaels' 2-3 defense beat the Hornets' 2-3 offense and again observers are hopeful, pointing out that inexperienced Bradford was experimenting against such a defense for the first time in a game. It was pointed out that the local failure to overland the defense, the most modern way of cracking the system.

ROBERT S. BRUST RETIREMENT OCCASIONS MAGAZINE COMMENT

The retirement of Robert S. Brust, of Stony Creek, as general plant manager of the Southern New England Telephone Company occasioned the following paragraphs in the December Telephone Bulletin, recently.

As an engineer student attending Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Robert S. Brust, who retired December 1 as SNET's general plant manager, worked his way through school repairing telephones and maintaining switching equipment for a small independent telephone company near Troy, New York.

He was a one-man plant department for the company, which served about 200 telephones, and he little realized then that one day he would head a 3,300 man telephone plant department in Connecticut. In fact, he had a very definite idea he wanted to be a civil engineer and work on big construction jobs. And when he was graduated in 1910, he turned down his first offer of a job from the New York Telephone Company, which had canvassed the graduating class for engineering talent. Although there was a business depression and unemployment was high, he kept on searching—without success—for the job he thought he wanted with some large building company.

But finally young Brust remembered his experience in telephone work and went back to C. P. Cooper, representative of the New York Telephone Company. At first he was told it was too late and the company already had its quota of engineering graduates. Then at the last minute, he was told he could report to work as a student telephone engineer.

Thus began a telephone career of 41 years. And although Bob Brust never became the practicing civil engineer he envisioned as a young graduate, he did get more than his share of work on big construction projects—bigger, in fact than he had ever dreamed. His first real assignment in New York was to integrate the outside plant of an independent telephone company which was being purchased by the New York Telephone Company. He was later a general foreman, directing construction forces, and then worked on the development of methods, materials and tools. Next came a transfer to the AT&T's operations and engineering headquarters, and then, in 1924, he moved to Connecticut as plant engineer for SNET.

Elementary schools now being planned should include more space and educational equipment to help children develop better socially and emotionally as well as mentally. This was proposed in report made public recently by the Metropolitan School Study Council, a research affiliate of Teachers College, Columbia University.

More Room Needed For Elementary Schools

Elementary schools now being planned should include more space and educational equipment to help children develop better socially and emotionally as well as mentally. This was proposed in report made public recently by the Metropolitan School Study Council, a research affiliate of Teachers College, Columbia University.

These features were recommended: large classrooms, providing forty to fifty square feet of space per pupil—twenty-four square feet is the average allotment at present; specially equipped rooms for the arts and sciences, conference rooms for school administrators, and multi-purpose gymnasiums and auditoriums.

To permit children to learn from first-hand observation, the report suggests larger play and work areas in and out of the classroom.

When passing another vehicle, always allow sufficient distance before returning to the right hand lane. Don't Cut The Other Driver Short!

and a few months later he assumed the post of general manager—just at the outbreak of World War II. If his desire to build wasn't satisfied during the hurricane, he was now slated for another chance—for as soon as the war was over it quickly became obvious that there wasn't nearly enough equipment, enough poles, enough wire lines, enough cable or enough of anything to take care of the huge, backed-up demand for new telephone service—a demand which was to continue to grow during the succeeding six postwar years.

The resulting postwar construction program will total $130,000,000 by the end of 1951 and has practically doubled the amount of outside telephone plant which existed in Connecticut ten years ago. It has been a tremendous building job—converting thousands of Connecticut telephones to dial operation, extending, replacing, increasing wire and cable lines in every corner of the state, building new underground cable facilities and installing service for hundreds of new housing developments throughout Connecticut—but one which has been a fitting job to the end for a man who yearned to plan and to supervise big construction projects.

According to a study made by the late Dr. Elsworth Huntington of Yale University, Connecticut produces more leaders per capita than any other state in the Union. Among the factors which Dr. Huntington believed responsible is the climate, which seems to be favorable for getting work done.

It is more important to know where you are going than to get there quickly. Do not mistake activity for achievement.
