Lodge Says Government Doings Should Be Available To Press

MODUS — Public officials have an especial responsibility to make the details of public business available to the citizens, Governor John Lodge told the Fall Conference of the New England Weekly Press Association here Friday night. "Stewardship of the people's affairs," he continued, "does not confer on the stewards the privilege of concealing the people's affairs from the people. But, by and large what goes on in government should be made readily and promptly available to the press," he told the newspapermen.

"Naturally," he said, "there are some fields in which it would be contrary to the public interest to blazon every detail of government operations on the front pages. This applies, as we all readily agree, to matters involving our national security or to certain phases of police business, for example. The voluntary censorship employed by newspapers during wartime is a splendid example of the cooperation of the press in such matters."

Lodge recalled that during his administration budget hearings were opened to the press for the first time and also said that he invited the press to attend his Cabinet meetings.

Noting that this is the season for annual reports, the Governor heads to his office, the Governor said, "Some of these reports naturally contain critical material. Such material, particularly if it happens to be brief, in the natural condensation of lengthy reports for a news story, might be construed as damaging to the administration in office. Perhaps it is; but it is our judgment that the press is entitled to examine these reports in full as rapidly as they reach our office and to handle them in any way in which the reporters and editorial writers see fit. Any attempt to censor such reports or to conceal them from the press would in my opinion be reprehensible in itself and a body blow at the very principle of free representative government."

He said that the weekly press with its intimate knowledge both of local public officers and its readers, is able to maintain "a vital connection" between citizen and government. "I do not need to remind this gathering," he continued, "that representative government cannot thrive if informed citizen interest and participation are lacking. And even in the intimate structure of the town meeting the public press plays a vital role in keeping straight the issues which sometimes get bogged down in the heat of discussion 'on the floor.'"

The Governor said that both in Washington and Hartford he has had many contacts with reporters and other representatives of the press and that he has often been struck with the similarities in the two spheres of public service represented by government and the public press. "It seems to me," he said, "that the press and government service have a great deal in common." He stated that both professions share great responsibility to the public.

For a breakfast treat, spread French toast or waffles with a thick layer of apple sauce.

For a most accompaniment with a delightful zip — add a tablespoon of horseradish and a dash of lemon juice to a cup of apple sauce.

Pleas the children by placing apple sauce in individual custard cups — top with marshmallow. Bake in hot oven (450 degrees F.) until the marshmallows melt and brown slightly.

For an after school snack let the children make apple milk shakes. Blend a cup of thin apple sauce with a scoop of ice cream. Add a cup of milk and beat until well blended. Pour into tall glasses and top with a dash of cinnamon. Serve immediately.

For a change in texture, serve a crunchy apple dessert. For a quick and easy to prepare apple cooking apples. Place sliced apples in a well buttered baking dish. Blend together ¼ cup butter, 1 cup brown sugar, 1/8 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon, 1/2 cup crushed cereal (corn or wheat flakes) and ½ cup chopped nuts (walnuts or pecans). Spread toppling over apples and pat down to cover apples. Bake in hot oven (400 degrees F.) for about half an hour or until apples are tender. Serve warm—plain or a la mode. For other suggestions and directions for preserving apples write to the Editor, College of Agriculture, University of Connecticut, Storrs, Conn., for your copy of "Choosing and Using Apples Wisely."

CHILD HEALTH

The start of the school year is the signal for parents to be extra mindful of proper health care for their children.

Immunization against such diseases as typhoid fever, diphtheria and smallpox are an important part of this health protection picture.

The process aids the body to create a storehouse of substances to fight infection. These are called immune bodies. They are formed when the germ of a specific disease is injected, although in a modified and harmless form. The result is known as active immunity. It requires a long period to develop, but thereafter affords protection for a number of years in many cases.

The capacity of the body to develop immune substances declines in time. It is active for only a few weeks in the case of influenza. It lasts one to three years in whooping cough and diphtheria, but in scarlet fever it may continue for life. Active immunity may be readily restored by "booster" injections, however, in diphtheria, tetanus, whooping cough and typhoid fever.

Immunization is good health insurance and parents should consult their family physician when considering protection for their children.

Robert A. Hall Named Chairman Of Citizens For Lodge Re-election

A Hamden man, Robert A. Hall of 5 Westland Rd., has been named chairman of the newly formed Citizens for Lodge organization and Town Counsel Herman M. Levy has been appointed a member of the steering committee of the group.

Hall, director of athletics at Yale from 1950 to 1953 and now vice president of Sarong, Inc., in a statement yesterday said: "The re-election of Gov. Lodge this fall is of such great importance to the State of Connecticut that nothing which would help to bring it about must be left undone. "In this connection I am speaking not only for myself but for a growing group of citizens who have discussed this matter informally and who are all keenly interested in helping to return John Lodge to the Governorship for another four-year term."

"At the request of this group I have agreed to become chairman of a Statewide organization to be known as Citizens for Lodge. We have established headquarters at 74 Aryston St., Hartford. It is our plan to set-up working committees on a local and district basis. We also are prepared to assist and coordinate the efforts of various groups which have indicated their desire to help the Governor's re-election."

"The campaign by Citizens for Lodge will parallel the general campaign but will be carried out on a distinctly non-partisan basis. The re-election of Governor Lodge is, in our opinion, so important to this State that it goes beyond any political considerations. The extraordinary record of accomplishment by his administration and his capacity for public service, make it imperative that we retain him in the Governorship."
