Moral Victory Won On Budget 37 Mills OK'd

Town Meeting To Vote On Addition Of 4 Mills Wed.

Twenty-seven invited representatives called in to peruse the town's original and revised 1955 budget squinted and strained over a published page of budgetary figures in the Town Hall Tuesday night.

After three hours of questions and suggestions on what to restore and what to leave out, 23 of the 27 expressed themselves as favoring the restoration of all the appropriations — some 141 thousand dollars worth — to the budget and the levying of four additional mills on the tax rate.

While the action, and the expressions of confidence in the Administration which were expressed by a number of those present had no legal weight, the meeting turned out to be a moral victory for First Selectman Frank Clancy.

He and the Board of Finance had insisted from the first that their original budget of $1,488,549.66 was the minimum and that a 37-mill tax rate was necessary.

Seated at long tables grouped in a large rectangle at the fore part of the Town Hall auditorium these representatives, specially invited by the first selectman and representing most of the civic associations and some of the other more prominent civic organizations discussed the budget in a civil atmosphere.

With each representative behind a place card and the Boards of selectmen and finance and other officials grouped at the head table, the hearing looked a little like a United Nations assembly.

Leslie Redfield, who acted as spokesman for the town, reviewed the budget, category by category. He told the meeting that the town meeting next Wednesday would have the power to okay "four mills, three mills, two mills or no mills."

However, he said, the revised budget was "the" budget and would have to stand. If the town meeting wanted to restore any of the items or reductions which were cut in the revision they could do so, if they voted additional mills.

Redfield said later that the town meeting would be asked to restore all the excised items and grant the supplementary four mills of taxes to finance these items. However, using the "third" (Continued On Page Two)

Suggests 35 Mill Rate To Restore Vital Services

A two-mill increase coupled with suggested budgetary cuts totaling $44,820 would provide the town with sufficient revenues to operate all departments of the town government without a reduction in vital services. This is the claim advanced by Frank Barker, minority member of the Board of Selectmen.

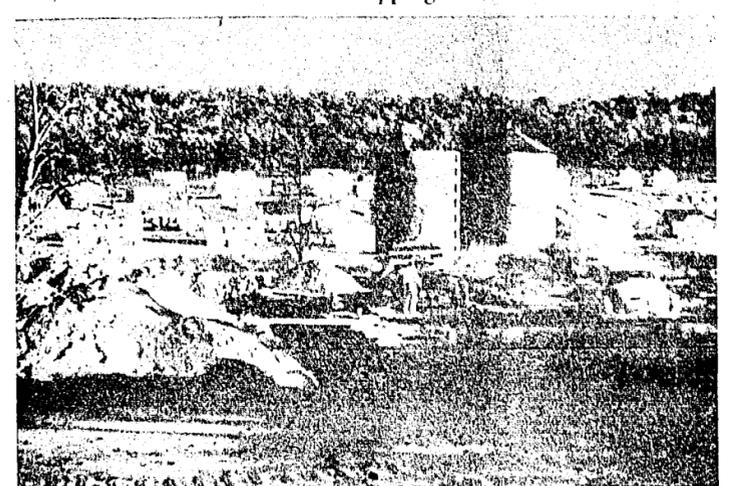

Barker advanced his suggested plan at a hearing on the budget in the Town Hall Tuesday evening, on the ground that the Administration may not get the full four additional tax mills it is requesting. He released figures to support his recommended changes.

The Republican selectman also claimed that the Town Administration had unnecessarily pared $6,000 worth of state highway grants from its indirect revenue account, and failed to take advantage of another $2,500 in state aid for its Public Works department, a total of $8,500 in indirect revenue.

Figures Disputed
The figures were disputed by First Selectman Frank Clancy who insisted that a cut in Public Works expenditures by the town meant a cut in state grants. Barker, however, insists that the amount allotted to the town is fixed and not on a percentage

Site Of New Shopping Center

Workers began laying forms this week for the foundation of a six-story shopping center near the Riverdale development in Foxon. The building will go up on land purchased from Fred Borrmann, developer of the area. The site was rezoned for business by the Planning and Zoning Commission last year. Picture shows Riverdale in background as silos which were part of old farm.

Resistance To Shopping Center Collapses; Residents Still Angry

"You can't fight city hall." Under that old political maxim, opposition folded last week among Riverdale residents angered over the erection of a six-story shopping center near their Foxon housing development.

The Riverdale residents claim that they had consented to the establishment of a small community store there, but not the large shopping center now about to be built.

They admit, ruefully, that they failed to stipulate their conditions when they voted their approval of rezoning the store site from residential to business at a hearing of the Planning and Zoning Commission last year.

Republican-controlled But they are still angry with the commission for failing to heed their requests for a change back to residential after they got wind that the property was being sold for someone else to build on.

Riverdale residents tell it. Early last year, Borrmann secured the assistance of Theodore Shumway, president of the Riverdale Civic Association, in securing 112 names on a petition favoring the rezoning of the property in question. Borrmann told them, Shumway claims, that he would build a small "community store" of Cape Cod design.

On July 1, 1953 the Planning and Zoning Commission held a hearing on the proposed rezoning of the property from residence to business. Of about 20 persons in attendance, only Mrs. Arthur Martelli of 801 North High St., registered her disapproval, but later withdrew it in the face of general support. The property was subsequently rezoned.

Earlier this year, Borrmann put the property up for sale. Riverdale residents, apprehensive over the possible use of the site for a larger establishment than they favored, petitioned the Planning and Zoning Commission for a rezoning back to residential.

Letter Written
On July 1, this year Shumway wrote Charles Miller, Chairman of the commission a letter which said in part:

"The members of the Association supported Mr. Borrmann last year because he promised to build a 'Community Store' on the same location (more or less) as the old barn. . . . The store was to be a grocery store to serve the community. . . . We would appreciate prompt action on this request since the land is now in the process of being sold."

A letter was also sent to the Besley Company, realtors handling the sales, advising it of the petition. Shumway claims, that he

Hackett Backs Foxon Bus Run

William Hackett, Jr., Democratic candidate for state representative, made a popular move when he asked the Connecticut Legislature to make a survey of Foxon for possible bus service.

The company will provide a bus for an inspection run at 4 p.m. tomorrow (Friday). It will stop at the Town Hall to pick up invited persons to go along on the run. A study will follow.

If conditions warrant, and the PUC approves, a trial service will be run.

Garden Club To Hear Official Of N. H. Park Dept.

The Garden Club of East Haven will meet on Wednesday, in the Haganun Memorial Library with Mrs. Frank Laine presiding.

Mrs. Harry Lewis, program chairman, will introduce Walter Kenny of the New Haven Park Department who will be the guest speaker for the afternoon.

Due to a recent change in the by-laws, election of officers will be held at the combined November-December meeting next month. Mrs. Laine reminded the members. A nominating committee will be selected at Wednesday's meeting.

Mrs. A. Michael Aceto will be chairman of the tea committee, assisted by Mrs. Walter Schoenknicht, Mrs. George Sullivan and Mrs. Francis Flood. Mrs. Raymond McCain will make the arrangement for the tea table, and Mrs. Arthur Rosenquist will pour.

School Site Up For OK At 2nd Town Meeting Oct. 29

Authorization for the purchase of properties totalling about 16 acres more or less and located off No. High St. for use as a site for future school building will be sought at a separate town meeting on Friday, Oct. 29. This will be two days after a town meeting on budget matters.

The Elementary School Building Committee reported this week that it has secured options on several parcels of land which comprise an area 250 feet east of No. High St. and measuring approximately 521 feet wide and 1,220 feet deep.

The options were obtained in accordance with authorization voted at a town meeting on May 18, 1953.

The cost of the property will be in the close vicinity of $20,000 plus $750 for a piece of property to serve as a right of way into Hudson St. Hudson St. leads off No. High St. and is just south of the property.

Final cost will not be known until after a survey is completed of each parcel and its area determined. The purchase price is being determined on a per acre cost.

The committee revealed that it had secured options from three landowners: Anna and George W. Cayley, of 271 No. High St., Karl and Emily Fingler, of New York City; and Ruth H. Friend of 243 No. High St.

Press "Reasonable"
The Elementary School Building Committee announced also that "while negotiations were prolonged over a long period of time, those who agreed to sell their land for school purposes adjusted their prices to a reasonable figure in order to permit the town to secure land for educational purposes."

The property was described as having "excellent drainage" with the Farm River which runs through the Eastern end of the area serving as a natural outlet. In addition, the land is high so that there is no danger of flooding by that source at any time.

The soil was described as composed of bank run gravel covered by an average 12 inches of natural deposit loam. The terrain is flat for the most part with one natural depression and a mound of soil which will be sufficient to fill that depression and level out the entire property.

"One of Driest"
The plot was described as "one of the driest areas on No. High St." It is located, the committee said, about six-tenths of a mile north of the town's geographical center.

Right of way into the property is 100 feet wide and 120 feet deep.

The committee declared that the properties of the proposed site represent "one of the last pieces of sizable acreage left in the town for school purposes." In addition, "it is the last piece of property in central location of such size and quality," the committee said.

The committee said that the negotiated prices for the land "fall far below those which have been paid for similar sites in the greater New Haven area."

Besides being property of very good grade, the location was one of the very best being close to the large residential area which is being built up in the Farm River valley, the committee reported.

Should sewers be installed in East Haven, a main line will run down along the Farm River. Thus, a hook-up from the school could be made with ease, it was pointed out.

Voters Must Look To The Man For Judge Of Probate, Says Copeland

The voters of East Haven "should look to the man, his educational background, his experience, his adaptability, his honesty and his integrity" in selecting a judge of probate. So declared Charles M. Copeland, Democratic nominee for the East Haven Probate Court, this week.

Copeland, a former deputy judge in the town court in his bid for the local judgeship stressed his academic training at St. John's University where he majored in probate practice and labor law before receiving his bachelor of laws degree.

"It should be clearly understood by all of the electors of the Town of East Haven that Probate Court decisions are governed by statutory law," Copeland said. "All matters before the court must be handled in a uniform manner with the same degree of justice to all. On the other hand, the efficiency and economical operation of the offices depend entirely on the experience, adaptability, honesty and integrity of the man elected."

Copeland said he viewed the court as a "people's court where a sympathetic understanding of people's problems, experience and a thorough knowledge of law, taxes, accounting and business are necessary requisites for the judge of such a court." He promised to "be available at any time for advice."

Copeland, who is 49, received his elementary education in the parochial schools and his high school education at St. Francis Prep. He graduated from Fordham pre-law school before attending St. John's University.

He has been a member of the New York State Bar since 1939 and has been admitted to practice before the United States Tax Court and the United States Treasury for over 10 years.

In addition to practicing law in New York he has been a tax consultant and accountant for more than ten years and maintains offices in New Haven and New York.

He is a charter member and past president of the East Haven Exchange Club. He is a former member of the Board of Education.

Two Officials May Be Listed As 'Witnesses'

The question of a "cover-up" of police information to spare embarrassment for two prominent officials reportedly involved as witnesses in a police raid on a local inn-keeper's Sunday night lunch tudy over Police Headquarters.

Police records reporting a two-man raid Sunday night on Florio's Country House on Foxon Rd. were withheld from inspection by a reporter of the EAST HAVEN NEWS.

The proprietor, Pasquale Florio, was charged late Sunday evening with violation of the State Liquor Control Act following a two-man raid of the restaurant premises at about 9:50 p.m. So reported Police Chief Edwin Priest, who said that the case was set for hearing in Town Court next Monday.

Refuses To Release Records
Priest said the proprietor was charged with "keeping open after hours," but that he was booked as violating the state Liquor Control Act. Bond is not required in these cases, he said.

However, Chief Priest refused to release for inspection the report filed by the arresting officers. He did so on the basis of a legal opinion, recently publicized, that police reports are confidential information until the time of trial.

Reliable sources reported that four-identified witnesses and one un-identified witness were cited by the arresting officer. These same sources claimed that the arresting officer attempted to attach the names of the identified witnesses to his arrest report and was not permitted to do so by a superior officer.

The police chief was asked if this were true. He looked pained as he replied "no such thing." He said that it was not standard procedure to list witnesses on the officer's report form.

Chief Priest was reminded that the Liquor Control Commission's police referral form states in one place: "Please be careful to include: 1. Names and Addresses of All Witnesses." He acknowledged this but said that this was not part of the police officer's report.

Priest had said before that he could state truly "there are no names on that report of any patrons." Or witnesses, he added in response to another question.

Point Blank
These questions were put to him point-blank:
Q. Were there any witnesses?
A. Could be.
Q. Were these people witnesses?
A. A list of four names alleged to be witnesses at the raid was read off. The list included two town officials.

A. I can't say.
"Throughout the entire interview the police chief was very polite and cordial to the reporter. He was told that his failure to produce the records would be reported in this story."

Chief Priest replied politely: "Go ahead, that is your privilege." He said he was sorry but he would not release the records. He considered them confidential information. But he could say there were no witnesses listed in the report.

Sturges Endorses Reynolds For Probate Court

Judge Clifford B. Sturges, a former Judge of Probate in the New Haven Probate District Court, this week endorsed Edward L. Reynolds as Republican nominee for judge of the East Haven Probate Court.

"I have known Ed Reynolds since he was an infant," Sturges said, "and I have watched him grow to manhood. I know that his experience and ability as an active practicing attorney who has handled many probate matters. That combined with his honesty, integrity, courtesy and humane understanding make him an outstanding candidate for the position of Judge of probate."

Sturges also threw a barb in the direction of the Democratic party by stating: "To the best of my knowledge, Ed Reynolds' opponent (Continued On Page Two)

What Kind of A Man Is Abe Ribicoff? Few men in public life have merited such high praise from the press —

The whole story of Abraham Ribicoff's career, from New Britain newspaper to leader of the Hartford County bar and Congressman from his district, is about as fascinating an American success story as anyone could ask.

By naming the remarkable Ribicoff, as the Saturday Evening Post aptly tagged him a couple of years ago, the Connecticut Democrats have chosen their strongest vote-getter in years...

Abel Ribicoff is a conscientious legislator and he was deeply and sincerely interested in finding out how the GIs lived on foreign soil.

Abel Ribicoff has something of the spiritual in his make-up. He has an awareness of ethics all too seldom found in those who lead in political parties.

Mr. Ribicoff is a public leader who has already won a place in the esteem of all who appreciate public service of high standard...

33 Mills Not Enough

Thirty-seven representatives of various organizations throughout the town were mostly won over Tuesday night to the Administration's point of view that its original budgetary recommendations were sound and its 37-mill tax rate justified.

A number of these people were handpicked, and the most violent critics of the budget were conspicuously absent. Nevertheless, there were enough on hand who were sincerely interested in the budget to make a difference. At least, some members of the opposition had their chance. None succeeded in knocking down the budget.

The Administration deserves praise for the manner in which it arranged and conducted the meeting. In fact, the spectacle of a group of men acting in an orderly and polite fashion contrasted sharply with the run-away town meeting which preceded it by a few weeks.

And those who attended deserve praise for the manner in which they went at their task. Here, perhaps, is the precedent for future budget hearings BEFORE town meetings.

And here, perhaps, is the precedent for future budget hearings BEFORE town meetings.

While we do not share the general conclusions of this representative group, it must be conceded that 33 mills is not enough.

It would appear that only minority Selectman Frank Barker, who is intimately acquainted with our town government through being the former first selectman, was equipped and ready to challenge the original budget. So far, his has been the only calculated alternative to the full 37-mill rate.

But, without necessarily taking his side, we can point out that he also contends, despite his criticisms of the budget, that another two mills are needed. We are not making an exception, to his suggested cuts, however. That is with regards to the retirement of the fire marshal. If at all possible, we would like to see him continued on the payroll as long as he is physically fit and for a few years more.

How much of the supplementary four mills will be voted is up to Wednesday's town meeting. We hope that it is orderly and that the action taken is responsible and reasoned.

UN's Birthday

Sunday will be the ninth birthday of the United Nations. Just nine years ago this October 24, the Charter of the UN was ratified by all of the five major powers who hold permanent seats on the Security Council, and the UN was born.

The preamble to the UN begins: "We, the peoples of the United Nations determined to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war, which twice in our lifetime has brought untold sorrow to mankind."

It is pledged to "unite our strength to maintain international peace and security" and "to promote social progress." That's a large order.

Stronger than its predecessor, the League of Nations, because the United States is a participant and a leader, the United Nations still faces innumerable obstacles in achieving its goals of international peace and well-being.

In some ways, the UN has been a disappointment. It has not halted war, although it has managed to limit or even curb aggression on a minor scale, relatively speaking. It does not provide international security in the total sense. Furthermore, its halls serve as a sounding board for the false propaganda of Russia and her satellites.

But the UN is more than just an imperfect instrument for promoting international co-operation and discouraging war. It is more than an international social service agency, although its role in this area has been unfortunately diminished.

The UN is a symbol of the striving for international co-operation. We, all of us, every nation, have no choice but to strive for some form of international modus vivendi and to go on striving. The alternative is mutual annihilation.

Stringfellow's Folly

Rep. Douglas Stringfellow (R-Utah) has admitted the hoax. The 32-year-old Congressmen has set the record straight by declaring that he had never served in the OSS during World War II. As he had led his constituents to believe during a short but active political career.

Stringfellow, during his campaigning, had asserted that he was the hero of a one-man cloak and dagger affair which the German lines in World War II which resulted in the capture of a German scientist engaged in the perfection of an atomic bomb for the enemy.

"Truly heroic" it had been true. But the Army Times last week gave first insight that all was not on the level in connection with the Congressman's "war stories." Stringfellow, the contest was won on a triumph at the very time he claimed to have been behind enemy lines as a spy.

Stringfellow immediately went on record as labeling The Times story an "unfounded attack . . . politically inspired." Then he went into a shell of silence. He would not discuss the article further until he had read it in its full version. He said he was consulting his attorneys with an eye to suing The Army Times.

It is now a matter of record, placed there by Stringfellow himself in a dramatic week-end disclosure, that The Times has been right all the while. The entire situation deserves no little amount of thought. What started the Congressman off on his wild stories in the first place?

Stringfellow says his story grew as he embellished it during the course of more than 200 speeches. "I fell into the trap, which in part had been laid by my own glib tongue. I had been a prisoner of my own making," he now asserts.

Actually, the Congressman most likely started adding to his war record with unfounded details of missions of myth for one reason alone: to get the "veterans' vote." And herein lies the trouble.

As was stated in these columns last week, one of the by-products of war has been "professional veterans" whose thoughts and actions all revolve around veterans. Stringfellow lauded his war record because it was appealing to some veterans of Utah — enough, so to elect him to Congress.

That a candidate for public office is a veteran is far from sufficient qualification for election to that office and the sooner American voters get away from supporting a candidate for the mere fact that said candidate is a veteran, there will be no more "String-fellow incidents."

We have had the case of the "heroic" Canadian Boy Scout leader who buffaloned Quentin Reynolds, Sen. McCarthy, among his many trophies. He was found not to be a wounded Marine, but the victim of a nautical tradition at the crossing of the Equator. And now Rep. Stringfellow. Enough is enough.

The Dog House

All within the same editions last week, New York papers told on the front page of Secretary Wilson's latest saggy dog story while the Washington Post and Times were reporting Republican campaign strategists were plugging for more humor in the speeches of their candidates.

Speaking of humor, it has been unreliably reported that Secretary Wilson, while president of General Motors, invented the automatic drive so that he could have one foot on the brake and the other in his mouth. But this report that Republicans have wanted to inject a little more laugh provocation in their speeches, that really stops us.

And chances are, what with Mr. Wilson's unfortunate experience now history, humor has probably spent its final night in the Republican camp, at least for 1954. Republicans, as we recall, assailed Adlai Stevenson as a political pumper when said Stevenson was running for office two years ago. Fact is, the charge still sticks by some GOP standards.

Getting back to Mr. Wilson though. Here again we have the example of a political rook-in-the-house, curmudgeon. As if his "kick in the pants" for General Motors is good for the nation's "commitment wasn't enough, Wilson now gets into the "dog house."

Actually, we think critics of both comments blew the thing right out of proportion — just as they might be expected to do with an election in the horizon. If it is true that Republicans would be expected to do had the shoe been on the other foot, we might add.

LITTLE LOVABLES
No one denies the justification for parents collapsing limply at the end of a day of dealing with their young, and teachers, too, come into the category. But teenagers and their young are so lovable that most of the third adults would not care to be relieved of their tasks.

These young hopefuls can be mighty cute at times. Like Eddie who came home from school last week and said, "Dad, if I saw you a dollar would you give me fifty cents of it?" His indulgent parent replied, "Why, yes, suppose so."

Then came the revelation, "Well, I saved it for you; remember, you told me you'd give me a dollar if I saw you. Well, I did it!"

Of course they can be too amatory — a doting mother introduced her boy to a neighbor. "This is my son Francis, Mrs. Murphy; isn't he a bright little fellow?" And Francis, looking at the neighbor, said, "Oh, yes, he is."

The small daughter of a newspaper editor came home from Sunday school with an illustrated card. "What's that?" she asked. "It's a card for you. It says 'I love you, dear'?" she inquired. "No," was the answer. "But it says 'I love you, dear'?" she asked. "Oh, it's just an advertisement."

The teacher was a little surprised when Johnny took her arithmetic question literally. She asked, "If you had a pig and you sold it for three dollars, how many would you have left?" "Six," was the answer.

A first grade teacher last week and struggled with the last question of the fourth time that day (once in the morning and twice at recess) as she gave the final quiz to Jimmy's palookas, who remarked thoughtfully, "These aren't mine." The harassed teacher counted to ten, then extracted a deep breath, and asked, "What's the answer?" "I want a divorce from my mother and father."

A young business man returned home after a tough day at the office, and found his two daughters, aged seven and nine, acting up pretty badly. He asked them a moderately severe question and sent them off to bed. Next morning he found a note pinned to his bedroom door: "Be good to your children and they will be good to you. (signed) God."

High School Notes

By Judy Gross
Last week the Future Business Leaders under the supervision of Miss Margaret Love, chose as their leaders for the following students: president, Judy Applegate; vice president, Carol Velardi; secretary, Rose Marie Velardi; corresponding secretary, Shirley L'Heureux; reporter, Raylene Hill. Good luck girls!

Wednesday the Grace-New Haven Hospital held open house. These girls who were interested in nursing made the trip to the hospital. The report from the girls was excellent and they had a very delightful and educational time.

Also this week choosing officers was the Yals Child Study Center, with the speaker, William Muehl, chairman of the PTA Council. Past finding committee will also speak. Mr. Muehl will discuss the effects on education of the recent budget revision.

Following the meeting, refreshments will be served by the mothers of children in the third grade class taught by Mrs. P. A. Folio.

Teachers will be in the rooms at 5:30 to greet parents and make appointments for individual conferences.

Thought for the week: "A fallure is purely based upon the person himself for not trying hard enough."

The East Haven students under the expert leadership of Mrs. Muehl and Chairman, Henry All-State center, included are Theresa Creech, soprano; Carol Velardi, alto; James J. Signano, tenor; Harvey Barker, bass; Sidney Clow bass. We are very proud of these selected students and we know that with the help of Mrs. Strandberg our group will do their part to make the concert a success.

Theme Of Movie At Old Stone Church
How an average American family, which had been taking its religion as a matter of course, was brought by a young visitor to the church, is presented on Wednesday, Nov. 3 and Nov. 10, at the Old Stone Church at 7:30 p.m.

All friends of the church are being invited to view the movie, filmed in Hollywood.

The film presents the story of the boy who cleaned up his room. "Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also."

Excited to enthusiasm by their pastor one Sunday over the idea of giving, the Strikers start out on a budget night in James Grellhouse, D.C. where he is preparing for the priesthood; and William, an engineering student at the University of Connecticut.

9:30 a. m. FAMILY SERVICES: Morning Prayer and Sermon, the Rector and Church School.

11:00 a. m. HOLY COMMUNION and Sermon, the Rector. At this service those members of Christ Church who were confirmed on Saturday, October 10 by Bishop Gray, will receive their First Communion.

3:30 p. m. Closing meeting of the Junior Confirmation Class.
7:00 p. m. Young Peoples' Fellowship will meet at the Rectory, 60 High Street. After their devotional opening and business they will have a panel discussion on the subject: "What Christ means to you" led by Mr. and Mrs. Ted Shapiro. Meeting will be presided over by the President, Miss Margaret Vandoren, and will commence at 7 p. m.

Lady of Pompeii Church Guild Plans Christmas Fair
The Ladies Guild of Our Lady of Pompeii Church is going "all out" to boost the church fund by arranging a gala Christmas Fair in the church hall, Saturday, Dec. 4, and Sunday Dec. 5. It was announced.

Residents can do their Christmas shopping early at the fair, it was stated.

First of a series of toy demonstrations will be held on Wednesday in the church hall at 8 p.m.

Children of members of the Glenmoor Women's Club will be treated to a Halloween party at the Town Hall on October 31st starting at 5 o'clock. Prizes will be awarded for various costumes.

Mr. Edward Wood is chairman of the affair. Other committee members include Mrs. Boris Shatkyevich, Mrs. Anthony Sarfotte, Mrs. Frank Bosco and Mrs. Charles Scallone.

It's budget, budget, budget! Hearing on the budget Tuesday night was very impressive. Tables all covered with charts, white paper. Even the press had a table set up. Doings, we suspect, of one George Chapman. Meeting very well conducted. Support of 37 mills was a moral victory for Frank Clancy.

Budget had some critics. Like the $1,300 that was trimmed of the town council's salary and added to the item on legal suits. Trims in indirect revenue collected by Barker.

Fallacies Of Food Faddism Revealed; Health Department Urges Varied Diet

The voice on the radio or on the platform urging us to use a particular food as a "cure-all" for this ache or pain and the item in the newspaper, magazine or booklet alleging that specific foods will give us the elixir of youth are examples of man's ancient belief in the specificity of certain foods.

Public health workers are frequently questioned as to the authenticity of such statements. But their giving indulgent, demagogic replies has not helped nutrition quackery, public health workers should be armed with answers based on sound nutritional facts.

Who's A Faddist?
The food faddist and nutritional quack may be likened to the peddler of snake-oil. He usually has certain identifying features of which all of us should be aware. They make the truest allegation fit: the diet of almost all Americans is inadequate; that many of the foods we eat are harmful or even dangerous; that malnutrition is rampant in our population; that almost every child is an actual or potential sufferer from some ailment because of diet; that there is nothing wrong with the diet of the average American.

Examples of Fads
Although facts of all kinds are abundant, it behooves public health workers to be especially aware of foods which are harmful to people's health. One of the "vitamins" in this category is the "diet with out milk." Milk, as all of us should know, is the nearly perfect food and is practically a necessity if our diet is to be adequate. Without milk, we are likely to be deficient in calcium but also protein and the vitamins, riboflavin, and niacin.

There are some faddists who advocate the use of raw milk as the only form in which it can be healthful. The decrease in vitamin C after pasteurization of raw milk is often a target for these faddists. Fact is, the amount of this vitamin in the form of milk—raw, is relatively low or variable and milk is never recommended by recognized nutritionists as a good source for vitamin C. Further, pasteurization destroys harmful bacteria which would be present in raw milk, thus making it safer.

Perhaps the fad most in the limelight during the post-war years among winter foods is "yogurt" or Bulgarian sour milk. It has been claimed that this is more healthful and superior in all respects to the usual forms of milk. Actually, the food value of yogurt is practically the same as that of the milk from which it is prepared. One of the harmful aspects of this fad is that small amounts of yogurt are used to replace necessary larger amounts of other forms of milk. In recent years yogurt has simultaneously come out of fashion and is being replaced by milk.

Another fad is the use of "diet supplements." As a result, it is estimated some $200,000,000 each year for "health foods," "health milk" and "diet supplements" they do not really need.

Now 316,000 Watts

This is WNHC-TV's Greatest Television Year

Since 1948 WNHC-TV has been bringing millions and millions of dollars worth of television enjoyment into the homes of its 3 1/2 million viewers. Every engineering development in this newest, most exciting industry has been included in WNHC-TV's construction of its transmitter and super-powered, 316,000 watt sending antenna. WNHC-TV has television on-the-spot, exclusive filmed news of floods, hurricanes, fires and other disasters. Channel 8 audiences saw exclusive films hours before these same scenes were transmitted by the networks to other viewers all over the country.

Proudly WNHC-TV displays plaques of Public Service awards presented by every conceivable Human Relations agency. WNHC-TV was the first station in New England to transmit commercial television. It was the first to present facsimile news pictures. It was the first to bring color to New England. What's in the future? Whatever it is, you will see it first on Channel 8, from Color Spectaculars to visits with your next door neighbor. That's the aim of WNHC-TV, its management and its highly specialized operating personnel, to devote 100% of their energy to serving you, the viewer, with uninterrupted service. Picture power is now 316,000 watts; no other American VHF television station can operate at greater power. No other station can bring more diversified programming into the home for adults and children alike. SUPER POWER? Yes! ... things look GREAT on Channel 8!

On Fluoridation: State Department Of Health Says Plan Reduces Decays

The following is a reprint of the Sept. 27 Weekly Health Bulletin of the Connecticut State Department of Health. It is presented here because of the public interest in the fluoridation system.

For almost a decade the public has known about a proven, safe and economical way to prevent tooth decay — fluoridation. If there has been any question about the acceptability of the method one has but to look at the impressive list of national and state health organizations that have expressed their approval. Since fluoridation is a matter for mature, professional judgment it is significant that the U. S. Public Health Service, an agency charged with the responsibility of establishing the health standards for the people of the United States, has issued an unqualified endorsement of fluoridation.

In the last decade many studies on the effects of fluorides on teeth have been made and reported in the literature. All invariably report dramatic reduction in tooth decay rates over a period of years. Grand Rapids, Mich., is such a city. In January, 1945, Grand Rapids began to fluoridate its water supply to determine the effects of bringing the fluoride content up to optimum levels for the control of tooth decay. This was the first city in the United States to adopt such a procedure.

In order to accurately measure the reduction in tooth decay, decay rates as they existed in 1944 were determined. Every year thereafter, dentists have re-examined children who had lived continuously in Grand Rapids to see if there was any improvement in the decay rate. For comparison purposes, the city of Aurora, Ill., was used. Aurora had a water supply containing natural fluorides of 1.2 p.p.m. the same as Grand Rapids added to its supply.

In 1945, Aurora had about two-thirds less tooth decay than Grand Rapids before fluoridation. Eight years later, the level of tooth decay in Grand Rapids now approximates that in Aurora, especially in younger age groups. The benefits that children of Aurora have always received are now being received by the children of Grand Rapids as a result of informed intelligent action.

Children who live in New Britain, Greenwich and Mystic. These communities have fluoridated and their children will, when they reach 12 years of age, have approximately one-half the decay they now have. Contrast these figures with the prevailing ones in Connecticut for 1953, six-year-old children in Grand Rapids had 70.8 percent less tooth decay than in 1944. At seven years of age there was 52 percent less decay; at eight years, 62 percent; at nine, 48.1 percent; at ten, 45.1 percent; at 11, 45.6 percent reduction.

To date in Connecticut we have only five installations in operation, two of these at state institutions. This means that the majority of Connecticut children are doomed to endure the same amount of tooth decay they have always had — that is all but the children in two state institutions and those

Table Talk

Grape jellies and jams have a high popularity rating. This is the time to take advantage of plentiful grapes to insure a supply of tasty grape spreads for your family, suggests Janina Czajkowski, nutritionist with the Agricultural Extension Service, University of Connecticut.

In grandma's day she had to make up her supply of jellies and jams while the fruit was in season. Now-a-days you can use your freezer to store the fruit, juice or puree, and convert it into jelly, jam or butter at your leisure. Grapes, to be used for making spreads, can be frozen without sweetening. For freezing select firm, ripe grapes with tender skins, full color and flavor. Wash and stem the grapes. Pack into containers. Seal and freeze. The freezing and thawing softens the fruit, releases the juice, and helps to dissolve the fruit color in the juice. Thus you may find that frozen grapes may need a shorter heating time to extract juices.

You will get clearer juice if you allow the juice to stand overnight in your refrigerator. The sediment will go to the bottom and you can pour off the clear juice. You may find that borax crystals may form in the frozen juice. These can be removed by straining the juice after it thaws. Cool the crushed grape pulp, and then press them through a sieve. You do not need to add sugar to either puree or juice but be sure you may plan to use the juice for making jelly and the pulp for
