

Author Lisanne Winslow:

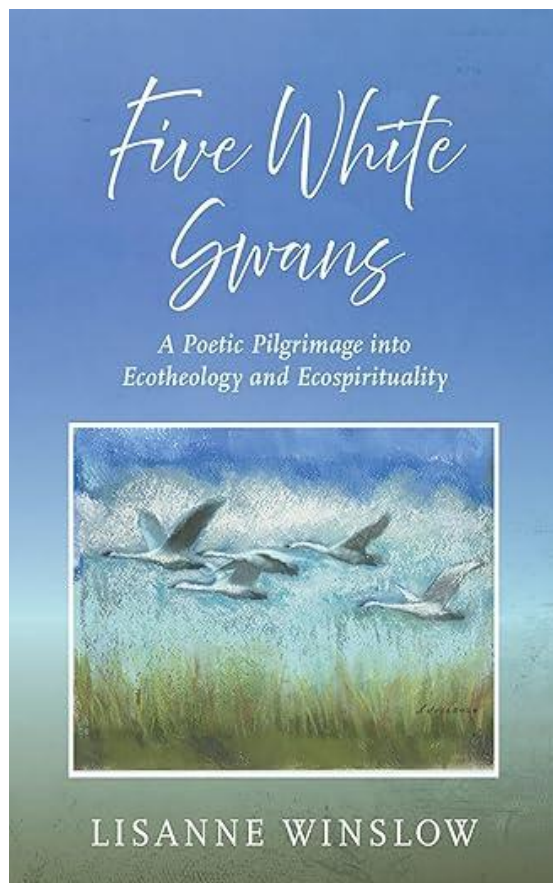

Short Biography:

Lisanne Winslow is a scientist, theologian, poet, mystic minister, and lover of all things wild and wondrous. With PhDs in both Cell Biology and Systematic Theology, she spends her days unraveling the mysteries of the natural world and contemplating the divine. Her writing dances between science and spirituality, weaving poetry, ecology, and deep theological reflection into works that inspire both awe and wonder. When she's not lecturing on marine conservation biology, meditating on the interconnectedness of life, or tending her beloved garden, she can be found at the shore, watching for a glimpse of the sacred in the rippling waves. She is the author of several books of poetry, including Five White Swans: A Poetic Pilgrimage into Ecotheology and Ecospirituality, A Trinitarian Theology of Nature (Princeton Theological Monograph Series Book 244), Inside the Heart of the Tornado, and In Praise of Creation.

Book Cover:

Five White Swans is a collection of ecopoetry by Lisanne Winslow that bridges biology, theology, and spirituality to explore nature's gentle power to heal humanity, connect readers to the earth and their spiritual selves, and promote a biocentric way of life. The book uses poetic imagery to reveal nature's capacity for spiritual guidance, leading to peace, well-being, and a deep connection with the more-than-human world.
