Charles McNair-Biography

Charles McNair was born in San Diego, CA, and after a year in college he enlisted in the Army as an operation room technician. His job was to assist in operations.

The hospital, the 45th Surgical, was the closest to Cambodia, at the end of the Ho Chi Minh and Sihanouk trails, both major infiltration routes and declared the most dangerous hospital in the world at that time. This hospital was the jumping off place for the Cambodian invasion of 5/1970 and was the first hospital in the evacuation chain. They were under near constant rocket, mortar and ground attack as well.

After discharge in 9/1971, Charles returned to college, finished the last three years in two, worked for a year then entered med school at UCSF. He moved to Connecticut, began his family and practiced internal medicine for 35 years.

The books are available through Booklocker and Amazon. Mr. McNair will sell them for $25 a piece-cash or check at the showcase.
